Who is the lady in the T.C. Steele portrait over the sideboard in the front hall? May Wright Sewall (b. 1844), owner of the Girls Classical School, writer, and Lecturer, “played a significant role in the cultural and social life of the capital city.” In addition to founding the Propylaeum Club she “enriched the city’s intellectual life through her efforts to form...the Indianapolis Women’s Club, the Art Association of Indianapolis (forerunner of the Indianapolis Museum of Art), the Contemporary Club, the Ramabai Circle (a group working to aid women in India), and the Alliance Francaise.” Her efforts on behalf of women’s suffrage Made her “an invaluable ally to ... Susan B. Anthony and Elizabeth Cady Stanton.”

Excerpts are from Sewall’s biography, “But I Do Clamor” by Ray Boomhower, published 2001
